Monthly Insight Report

August 2025

Introduction

Audit Yorkshire is a member of The Internal Audit Network (TIAN), which comprises of seven NHS internal audit consortiums and in house teams operating in England. These organisations collaborate across a number of areas to leverage their collective knowledge and expertise and drive efficiency and effectiveness. The NHS Monthly Insight Report highlights key publications and is intended as a useful update and reference tool. This report is produced by TIAN and shared by Audit Yorkshire.

Developments in the NHS
NHS England - Clustering arrangements	Clustering arrangements for integrated care boards (ICBs) have been agreed by NHSE's Executive team and by ministers. The agreed clusters will be implemented during Q3 of 2025/26 but not every ICB is involved in clustering arrangements. While clustering ICBs will work together through shared leadership and combined teams, they will remain separate legal entities. https://www.england.nhs.uk/integratedcare/integrated-care-in-your-area/more-about-each-integrated-care-system/ For information
NHS England – Provider Capability Assessment Guidance	Guidance and resources on the provider capability assessment thread of the NHS Oversight Framework have been published. These documents support NHS boards in assessing their organisation's capability on an annual basis against a range of expectations across 6 areas. Trusts must return the completed self-assessment and associated evidence (e.g. board paper) to their regions by 5pm on 22/10/25. https://www.england.nhs.uk/publication/assessing-provider-capability-guidance-for-nhs-trust-boards/ For information and action by all NHS Trusts
Nursing and Midwifery Council - Principles for supporting women's choices in maternity care	These principles have been developed in response to a changing maternity landscape, with more women seeking personalised care and, in some cases, making choices outside standard care pathways. Grounded in real-world practice, these evidence-based principles provide supportive information for midwives and employers navigating complex care scenarios. This will help ensure professionals can support women's individual choices while delivering safe, high-quality, person-centred care in line with the NMC code and standards. https://www.nmc.org.uk/standards/guidance/principles-for-supporting-womens-choices-in-maternity-care/ For information
Health Services Safety Investigations Body - An exploratory review of maternity	This report is a summary of information collected during an exploratory review of maternity and neonatal services in spring 2025. This review involved meetings with 17 stakeholders and a review of 35 safety concerns submitted to the HSSIB.

Health Services Safety Investigations Body - Medication not given: discharge from an acute hospital to the community	Medication is the most common intervention for patients in the NHS. In the most serious cases, delayed and missed medication can cause catastrophic effects. This report highlights the importance of information sharing between services to ensure patients are confident in medication self-administration. https://www.hssib.org.uk/patient-safety-investigations/medication-related-harm/third-investigation-report/ For information
Parliamentary and Health Service Ombudsman - Promoting a just culture	This guide sets out how to develop an organisation-wide culture that openly welcomes complaints and is accountable when mistakes happen. It explains how to embed the most important cultural values that encourage colleagues to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - view complaints as a vital tool for getting feedback from the people who use your service; and - use this feedback to improve colleagues' and organisational performance. https://www.ombudsman.org.uk/organisations-we-investigate/complaint-standards/uk-central-government-complaint-standards/uk-central-government-good-complaint-handling-guides/promoting-just-culture For information
Public Policy Projects - Operationalising value-based procurement	This report highlights how value-based procurement could revolutionise NHS care by improving outcomes and efficiency, but warns that entrenched budgeting practices, fragmented decision-making, and unclear definitions of value are blocking progress. It concludes that reform efforts must focus on long-term impact rather than short-term cost-cutting to unlock the full benefits for patients and the NHS. https://publicpolicyprojects.com/value-based-procurement-offers-transformative-opportunities-for-nhs-but-cultural-and-financial-reform-essential-for-success/ For information and reliability. Group membership can also hold appeal as it brings trusts under the umbrella of a central leadership team that is often highly experienced. This analysis focuses primarily on the leadership of NHS groups. Based on interviews with group leaders, it examines two key leadership roles: the group chief executive and the site leader (sometimes referred to as site chief executive or managing director). These roles exemplify one of the critical differences between the management of groups and NHS trusts: the division of strategic and operational leadership between a central group and local site-based leadership teams.

NHS groups: findings from interviews with group leaders in England

NHS Providers - Making commissioning strategic

Making commissioning strategic

Introduction to strategic commissioning

The 10-year health plan for England aims to devolve decision-making power from the centre to places, providers and to patients. To achieve this, it outlines a new operating model for the NHS, and an important element of this is a reframed and refocused role for integrated care boards (ICBs). The idea of ICBs becoming 'strategic commissioners' has been under development since late last year. As the 10-year health plan sets out, ICBs will be tasked with improving population health outcomes setting a long-term, evidence-informed strategy, and ensuring resources are allocated effectively.

This shift signals a clear move away from a more transactional model of commissioning, where contracts for individual services are procured and performance-managed in isolation. Instead, it encourages a more holistic, outcomes-focused approach. Done well, this approach has the potential to transform how health and care services are planned and delivered. It may open opportunities to tackle longstanding challenges such as fragmented care, misaligned incentives and reactive service models.

While NHS England's (NHSE) Model ICB Blueprint begins to articulate the value of strategic commissioning and how this function fits alongside the broader responsibilities of ICBs, commissioning does not begin and end with ICBs. For it to succeed, providers will need to play a key role: their insight, collaboration, and transformation and delivery capability will be critical. Both the Model ICB Blueprint and the 10-year health plan also signal opportunities for trusts to take on some elements of commissioning themselves, particularly where it enables service transformation and better integration.

This long read sets out how trusts and patients will benefit from a more strategic approach to commissioning, as well as how they are central to its success.

What is the role of providers in making strategic commissioning a success?

Strategic commissioning will require a reset in how ICBs work with trusts. In many integrated care systems, trusts have already become active partners in setting, shaping and delivering system-wide

NHS Providers (2025)

The idea of ICBs becoming strategic commissioners has been under development since late last year. As the 10 Year Health Plan sets out, ICBs will be tasked with improving population health outcomes setting a long-term, evidence-informed strategy and ensuring resources are allocated effectively. This briefing explores how a more strategic approach to commissioning can benefit patients and communities and how providers are central to its success.

Information Commissioner's Office

steps and how-to videos to help organisations understand how to check documents for hidden personal information and reduce the risk of a data breach. The guidance will help organisations ensure that when documents are disclosed to the public, it is done so securely - minimising the risk of accidental breaches of personal information. The guidance will help in any scenario where you need to check documents for hidden personal information before disclosing them to the public or a specific member of the public. For example, when:

- publishing documents online;
- sending a document to a customer; or
- responding to an information request (eg organisations may disclose documents to a specific member of the public when responding to a subject access request (SAR) under data protection legislation, and public authorities may disclose documents to the wider public under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (FOIA)

The ICO has also added to their library of FOI case studies with one about how NHS Informatics Merseyside have built a network to improve practice. The FOI team at NHS Informatics Merseyside won Team of the Year at the eCase FOI25 awards. The team provides FOI services to Mersey Care NHS FT which has around 12,500 employees, and it achieved 98% average compliance during 2024. The case study demonstrates the benefits of effective networking to support good practice within the organisation and beyond.

The ICO has ordered four other NHS trusts to take immediate steps to improve their FOI compliance due to extensive backlogs. As part of this they have issued three practice recommendations and one enforcement notice.

Parliamentary Office of Science and Technology - Geographical differences in healthy life expectancy

Healthy life expectancy (HLE) is the average number of years that somebody can expect to live in good self-reported health. Years lived in poor health reduce quality of life, increase demand on healthcare services, and have wider economic effects, such as reduced ability to work.

HLE varies widely across England. It is linked to the conditions in which people are born, live and work. More deprived areas are more likely to have lower HLE. In 2021–2023, there was a 17.9 year gap in HLE between Blackpool (52.3 years) and Wokingham (70.2 years). The local authority gap in HLE has increased from 14.8 years in 2011–2013 to 17.9 years in 2021–23.

The government's 2025 Fit for the future: 10 Year Health Plan includes aims to shift from “treatment to prevention” and from “hospital to community”. The 10 Year Health Plan pledges to improve HLE for all citizens and halve the gap between the richest (South East) and poorest (North East) regions of England.

HFMA – NHS Corporate Governance Map

The HFMA NHS corporate governance map has been updated, with items added since the last update marked as new. The map brings together the key guidance and models to support effective corporate governance within the NHS. Robust governance policies and procedures must be in place, and regularly evaluated, to ensure they remain fit for purpose. Aimed at NHS boards, governing bodies, audit committees and those NHS staff with an interest in governance, the purpose of the NHS corporate governance map is to highlight the published resources that support the development and maintenance of effective governance arrangements.

The map is split into four sections: strategic framework; enabling good governance; specific areas for assurance; and devolved nations. It signposts the key model documents and guidance available, and when they were last updated.
